

Published based on Agra - Pulling Travelers Searching For Something Different

Agra - Pulling Travelers Searching For Something Different

Agra is a city found in India, and it is a place where amazement and wonder come to be expected. Agra is the location of the incredibly impressive Taj Mahal and many other amazing landmarks and monuments. All of these sites and the experiences surrounding them result in a vacation that simply cannot be matched somewhere else. If there's a vacation coming up for you, and you're looking for a special place, check out Agra. You will have to get a passport for everyone in your family, though. If you need a U.S. passport for children, consider going online to get one.

Getting ready for a big trip can be very tricky, but thankfully there's a very useful tool available for travelers: online passport services. Any sort of passport service you need - new passports, child passports, replacements for a stolen pasport, and more - is available on these sites. You even get to choose when you'd like your passport delivered, and you have the option of having it in a day if you need it. After everything has been submitted, you are completely set.

Agra has three officially-declared UNESCO World Heritage Sites, and these statuses means they are places you definitely should check out. As you can imagine, one of them is the Taj Mahal. This huge white-marble monument is actually a mausoleum constructed under the order of the Mughal king Shah Jahan to his favorite wife. While the building itself is unbelievable, the area surrounding the mausoleum is as well. Gorgeous gardens full of colorful flowers, peaceful reflecting pools, and the beautiful stonework complete the picture. Inside are the tombs of the king and his wife, and the walls are inlaid with semi-precious stones.

The Agra Fort is another very famous landmark in Agra and another UNESCO World Heritage Site. Built out of stunning red sandstone, this forbidding-looking fort is gorgeous on the inside. Within the fort are several very beautiful buildings, all of which deserve to be seen. For example, the Pearl Mosque, Jahangir's Palace, the Mirrored Palace, and the Musamman Burj are all popular spots within the fort. You are able to see the Taj Mahal from the Fort on a nice day. It is here that Shah Jahan, the one responsible for the Taj Mahal, was kept prisoner by his son.

The third UNESCO World Heritage Site is Fatehpur Sikri. Built in 1570 by the Mughal king Akbar, this spectacular town is located only a small distance from Agra. Many people are sure to include it in their tour of Agra, as it is a large complex chock-full of cool things to see and explore. There are several different architectural influences visible. Buland Darwaza is called the Gate of Magnificence, and for good reason. This 15-story high gate is the largest in the world and is one of India's many impressive monuments.

People from all over the globe are attracted to Agra, and not only for the amazing monuments there. The Indian culture is so unique and so interesting. Before heading anywhere, you will need to get a passport, and that includes a U.S. passport for children. If you take your passport business online, you will find that it's much easier to do things like replace a stolen online passport and more.

You can also find this article published on Agra - Pulling Travelers Searching For Something Different, and on the tag pages Fort, passport, unesco world heritage, unesco world heritage site, unesco world heritage sites, World.