Canadian Sightseeing At Its Greatest - UNESCO World Heritage Sites That Impress And Intrigue

Taking an international vacation doesn't mean you have to take an airplane, and it doesn't mean you have to spend a whole lot of money. I've discovered that some of the grandest vacations are right near by, and one of these vacation destinations is Canada. Canada has so much to explore, and you don't need a full passport to get there. Passport cards, cheaper, more restricted versions of passports, were created to allow travel to areas around the United States without having to purchase a complete passport. And filling out a american passport card application can be done completely online.

If you choose to vacation in Canada, you will not have to worry about understanding the people as most Canadians speak fluent English. Also, the Canadian way of life is also very similar to that of Americans so while you will have the opportunity see many spectacular sights, you will feel right at home with the people. Occupying the same continent also keeps you with like time zones so when it's time to go home, you won't have to deal with jet lag. If you decide to fly, you will need a passport so remember that a rapid USA Passport renewal service is available from any of the passport agencies you will find online.

The United Nations through UNESCO has tried to insure that you don't miss a site of natural or cultural significance located in your vacation destination. They have done this by identifying World Heritage Sites and there are fifteen of these educational opportunities that can be enjoyed in Canada.

One of these sites is the Nahanni National Park Reserve. Rushing through this Reserve is the South Nahanni River, which flows past four huge canyons, eventually plummeting down in Virginia Falls, a giant waterfall twice as high as Niagara Falls. This park has sulfur hot springs, around which 100-foot-tall tufa mounds, over 10,000 years old, are located. Also in this park are complex systems of caves, which definitely warrant exploring.

One of the most unusual National Parks you will ever visit is the Dinosaur Provincial Park and is laden with dinosaur fossils. The visitor can view a selection from over five hundred excavated fossils some of which have been sent for display in museums all over the world. As we look back to the days when dinosaurs roamed the earth, this national park has made a huge contribution to the world's education and enlightenment on this subject.

A site in Canada that provides a glimpse into the history of the earliest North American inhabitants is L'Anse aux Meadows. The Norse people visited this land before Christopher Columbus and their visit to Newfoundland can be chronicled in relics found in this historic area. This discovery provides deep connection concerning not only Canadian history but also the history of the entire Northern American Continent.

As you can see, traveling doesn't require buying a plane ticket and flying for hours. A cheaper passport card and a little craving for adventure can send you on the trip of a lifetime. Download your pass port card application or your rapid passport renewal because Canada is just around the corner.
